

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: This is when I would tell my class that I wish we had math all day long! Okay? But Ms. Ferrant, I talked to her, and you're gonna continue this lesson tomorrow. 'Cause there's another part to it, or, Monday! Yeah. I thought it... Monday. So you're gonna continue the lesson, so in the last 2 or 3 minutes, we want you to do some reflection about what you did. Okay? So finish up your last idea, and then up here on the board, I have a question that says, "Reflection". I'd like you, privately by yourself, to tell us, If you were given the Pizza Crust problem again, do you think you would be successful at it? And why. So if she gave you the Pizza Crust problem a week from now, how would you do? Do you think you'd be successful? and why. Okay? Please answer that question and then we'll come around and collect your papers, So you want to make sure your name's on your paper. So make sure you answer the reflection question before you leave, 'cause we want to know what your thinking is.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Can you tell me, here, you built it on the side? So that we know, just say "I built it with my tiles."

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Can you see the question? Okay.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Should we just tell them to leave everything on their desks?

PATTY FERRANT: Yes, I'll...

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Okay.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Keep writing!

PATTY FERRANT: Keep writing!

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Okay, tell me what you understand, okay? When you say, "I completely understand it" Tell me what "it" is. Huh? Okay, what does that mean, how to solve it? What does that mean?

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: How to draw it out? Okay. So you can tell me.. draw what out? When you say "draw it out," what does "it" mean? STUDENT: Area?

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Area? Okay.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Okay, now hold on to it.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: Are you giving them their treats now?

PATTY FERRANT: Yes.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: I'll just tell them on their way out.

ANTOINETTE VILLARIN: All right, um, go ahead and wrap up your reflection, yes, Alex? Yeah, just keep it on your desk, we'll come by and clean up for you, and pick up your papers. Make sure your name is written on your paper, and I just wanted to say thank you for coming in and letting me teach a lesson, you guys are an awesome class.
